How to get here

Achnabreac is about 2½ miles (4km) north of Lochgilphead on the A816. Look for a turning onto a forest road, with a green sign to 'Achnabreac'. Follow this for about ¼ mile (500 metres) to reach the turning into the car park.

Trail Information

Rock Art Trail ○○○

Starting at the easy access parking further up the forest road from the main car park this trail cuts through the forest to visit one of Achnabreac's enigmatic cup and ring marked stones. There are also great views over Loch Gilp to the hills of Arran.

Wide, firm and smooth gravel surface throughout. Some moderate slopes, but plenty of resting places along the way.

½ mile / 0.8 km
Allow ¼ hour

Cup and Ring Trail ●●●

Discover some of Scotland's most extensive prehistoric rock art. Search for two great viewing areas of cup and ring carvings that date back over 4,000 years.

Uneven gravel path, with some narrow, grassy and potentially muddy sections. Some steep slopes. Includes sections of boardwalk with steps. Look out for vehicles along the forest road.

1¼ miles / 2.0 km
Allow ¾ hour

Dragonfly Trail ●●●

A gentle meander round the wetland pocket at the edge of the forest. Keep an eye out for variety of wildlife at different times of the year.

Firm gravel surface throughout with some loose sections. Mostly flat with some moderate slopes.

½ mile / 0.8 km
Allow ¼ hour
